Données politiques :

The first regional elections were held in December 2020. The ruling party, the Cameroon People's Democratic Movement (CPDM), won nine out of ten regions. These elections mark the beginning of the decentralization process provided for in the 1996 Constitution. The new regional councilors will work with the Ministry of Decentralization and Local Development to gradually transfer power and necessary funds to the regions. The presidential elections are scheduled for October 2025. And while the question of a new candidacy for President Paul Biya is being raised, the opposition is consulting with a view to a possible single candidacy. A stable country for several decades, Cameroon has been facing attacks by the Boko Haram group in the Far North region and a separatist movement in the English-speaking regions for several years. Since September 2017, this situation has caused the displacement of more than a million people within the country and Cameroon has hosted approximately 470,000 refugees. Following the resurgence of the crisis in the Central African Republic since January 2021, more than 6,000 Central African refugees have fled to the Eastern region of Cameroon, which already hosted more than 60% of Central African refugees. According to figures from the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) as of July 2024, Cameroon currently hosts more than 472,000 refugees, mainly from the Central African Republic (73%) and Nigeria (26%).

Indicateurs politiques :

Données économiques :

Cameroon's economic recovery slowed in 2023, with real GDP growth of only 3.3%, compared to 3.6% in 2022. Until early 2024, all estimates of real GDP growth in 2023 hovered around 4.0%, but the latest national accounts for the last two quarters of 2023 showed a sharp slowdown in growth. This slowdown was observed in the primary, secondary and tertiary sectors, in a context of ongoing fiscal consolidation, rising domestic inflation and multiple sources of fragility, including internal conflicts.
